Are you a woman who has been diagnosed with Breast Cancer?

The Navigator Program May Help

Are you wondering what to do or where you can go for information? Would you like to talk to another woman who has been in a similar situation and who can understand your feelings?

The goal of this early and on-going support program is to reduce anxiety by providing information, support and encouragement. Armed with this support, you may be better prepared for the personal journey ahead.

Upon entering the program, you will be connected with a trained Navigator Volunteer. The Navigator Volunteer will be a breast cancer survivor, who has experienced a similar diagnosis and is specially trained to help guide you and your loved ones through this journey.

There is no charge for the Navigator Program. The Navigator Volunteers are available to you when you need emotional support, information and reassuring guidance. The Navigator Program does not take the place of medical care you are receiving from your health care provider. They will work with your clinical care providers to assist you in receiving optimal information and support as you go through your cancer experience.
